NEW BOARD OF MEDICOS

Improvement at the Queen's Hospital.
Willis Premises.

Doctors Jonathan T. McDonald, Charles B. Cooper, W. H. Mays, Archibald N. Sinclair and Wm. L. Moore constitute the board of examining physicians for the Kalihii station under the new rules and regulations of the Board of Health, adopted in pursuance of the law passed at the late regular session of the Legislature.

Dr. McDonald comes in ex officio as the Government bacteriologist and the rules further require that a physician used to microscopical investigation shall be another member as assistant bacteriologist. Dr. Sinclair is understood to be this individual. Dr. Herbert having expressed a desire to retire from the old board, the new law is complied with merely by the accession of Dr. McDonald.

This was the only business President Pinkham had to lay before the Board of Health, requiring action on its part, at yesterday's meeting. A motion did it.

The president conveyed an item of information on another subject as follows:

"Individual members of the Board of Trustees of the Queen's Hospital have indicated their intention of erecting in an isolated part of the grounds of the Queen's Hospital a small ward to which contagious, or suspicious, cases can be moved for a few hours in which to determine and dispose of them in a proper and intelligent manner. This will be a most commendable course, as it will promptly relieve the hospital, and, at the same time, greatly aid the Board of Health."

Another matter occurred to the president, which was informally talked over. This was the need of additional quarantine room for contagious disease cases that might appear at Hilo, owing to the setting apart of a portion of the present quarters for Dr. Rice's experiments.

Still another thing mentioned by the president was the fact that the Bishop Willis premises in Bates street were going to be put into sanitary condition and thus their already ordered condemnation be averted.

Those present were L. E. Pinkham, president; Abraham Fernandez, Dr. J. T. Wayson, Dr. J. R. Judd and Fred. C. Smith. It was Dr. Judd's first appearance as a member, he having been confirmed by the Senate a week previous.

COUNTY LAWSUIT

Some of the Points
Against the Act.

An effort is being made to create the impression that nothing is being done towards the immediate test of the County Act in the Supreme Court. The fact is the work is going on steadily and it is hoped the form of submission will be ready this week for examination by the Attorney-General and Henry E. Cooper, chairman of the County Act Commission. At all events it will be completed by Monday next.

It has been necessary to collect much information, especially in reference to the bonded indebtedness for public improvements within the Territory, which, it will probably be claimed, is or would be affected by the Act.

A nut for the vociferous advocates of "local self-government" to crack is the mode of sustaining the counties. By the division of territorial funds, which the Legislature has adopted over the Governor's veto, "Local self-government," so some interpreters have it, means that the tax-payers within each county or municipality are in reality also called upon to pay for the expenses of a county in which they do not reside.

There is yet this point to consider. No man can say yet that the Supreme Court will handle this matter under submission, but the precedents in this territory give credence to the thought that the Supreme Court will take cognizance of the test case if so submitted. It is asserted by the opponents of the new County Act that no one would object to the legality of the Act being passed upon quickly by a submission of the facts, unless he had a motive for blocking action, and desired to see a decision thereon held back indefinitely.

Judge Highton, who has been retained to make the test before the Supreme Court, does not assume the position of feeling or advising that it will be a successful mode of interesting the Supreme Court by a submission of facts, but he believes that it will be one of the wisest courses to pursue to ascertain whether or not the Court will accept the case.

One of the strong arguments against the County Act is believed to rest in the irrevocable pledge of the Territory to pay its outstanding bonds from the consolidated funds of the Territory. The present law would give the counties fifty per cent of the territorial revenues, and therefore make the counties a charge upon the territory. Thus county organization, at least under the new county act, makes it a territorial charge. The counties generally legislate for themselves and pay the bills, but the counties proposed intend to make use of the territorial credit, which is believed to be a blow at the financial integrity of the Territory in the payment of its bonded indebtedness. This is regarded as one of the absurdities of the county act, and may be one of the features to be most attacked in the test case.

The bonds were guaranteed by the consolidated revenues of the Territory. To divert fifty per cent of the revenues to the counties may be impairing the obligation of the contract. The man who bought a territorial bond, no doubt purchased it on the terms of the law as it then stood.

One interpretation of the County law is that the county of Hawaii contributes to the funds of the county of Oahu and vice versa, and that each county contributes to the funds of all the others.

ANCIENT LOVE LETTER.

The world possesses many love songs of the old Egyptians, but a genuine love letter had not heretofore been found. Only recently, in Chaldea, was a love letter found, written on clay. Though the letter has much formality for such a missive, the reader can feel the tenderness that lies hidden between the lines. The document was written in the year 2200 B. C., and was found in Sappara the Biblical Sepharvati. Apparently the lady lived there, while her beloved was a resident of Babylon. The letter reads:

"To the lady, Kasbaya (the little ewe), says Gimil Marduk (the favorite of Merodach), this: May the sun god of Marduk afford you eternal life. I write that I may know how your health is. Oh, send me a message about it. I live in Babylon and have not seen you, and for this reason I am very anxious. Send me a message that will tell me when you will come to me, so that I may be happy. Come in Marchesvan. May you live long, for my sake."

REGO GETS ONE YEAR

Law's Lightest Penalty
With Most Liberal Construction.

Manuel A. Rego, the defaulter for $37,000 and odd as postmaster of Koloa, Kauai, received from Judge Dole yesterday the minimum penalty and, not only that, but the most liberal construction of the law violated. He had been convicted on four counts, the lowest penalty for each being imprisonment at hard labor one year, but the court was authorized to make the several terms run concurrently, and so ordered. This makes Rego's actual term of servitude one year, which may be further reduced two months by good behavior. Rego had made restitution of the shortage to the United States.

A. S. Humphreys, when the time for sentence arrived, made a strong plea for leniency which he emphasized by mentioning the coincident event of the birth of a son to Rego that very morning. The defendant had a wife, five children and a mother looking to him for support. A petition for clemency signed by leading business men was presented.

Rego was so filled with emotion as to be speechless for a time when asked the question if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him. At length he answered in the negative.

Judge Dole remarked upon the insidious nature of the crime of embezzlement, often beginning with honest intent to restore the money first embezzled. Account was taken of the petition in defendant's favor and the court proceeded to pass the mildest sentence possible upon the offender.

Rego, while in the court precincts before removal, gave way to tearful grief. A jurymen seeing the way he was taking on gently rebuked him, saying that he ought to consider himself fortunate in escaping a much heavier sentence. His duty was to attend to whatever might be done in arranging for the welfare of his family during his absence. This advice caused Rego to brace up and take his medicine like a man.

FISH THAT PREY ON MOSQUITOES

The following correspondence on the subject of mosquito-eating fish will be interesting to those who seek the removal of the local mosquito scourge:

Leland Stanford Junior University, Office of the President, Stanford University, Cal. April 18, 1905.
Mr. D. L. Van Dine, United States Experiment Station, Honolulu, Hawaii—

Dear Sir: The best place to collect the fishes which you want would doubtless be in Louisiana. It would probably take no longer time to bring them from there than from other places nearer. Perhaps an equally good place would be Tampico, on the edge of Mexico. You understand that this would necessarily be an experiment. These little fishes feed freely on mosquitoes. Some live in brackish water, some in fresh water, and all of them are very hardy. But no one has ever yet tried to transplant any of them, and the whole thing might turn out, for some reason or other, to be a failure. Especially one would need to experiment on feeding the little fishes during their transportation. The genera which I would recommend are Mollinnesia, Adinia, Gambusia and Fundulus. Some of these are viviparous, others lay eggs. Whoever undertakes this should give a good deal of attention to the question of feeding the little fishes, and for this purpose perhaps a tank breeding mosquitoes would be as good as anything. The best time to undertake it would be about the 1st of June. I will select some one as soon as I hear from you.

Very truly yours,
DAVID S. JORDAN.

Leland Stanford Junior University, Office of the President, Stanford University, Cal. April 19, 1905.
Mr. D. L. Van Dine, Experiment Station, Honolulu, Hawaii—

Dear Mr. Van Dine: With the understanding that the matter is an experiment and that it may fail either in the difficulty of transporting the fishes or in fitness when they are transported, and taking no blame to himself in case he does his best, Mr. E. C. Starks, one of our instructors, will undertake to go to Tampico or to New Orleans and select a half dozen species, more or less, of top minnows and transport them to Honolulu. He would undertake this work on the same terms for which we do work for the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries—that is, actual expenses plus $1 per day for wear and tear on clothing and other matters which are not covered by the ordinary expense account. He is probably the best man I could get for this purpose, as he has had large experience in collecting in the tropics and is well acquainted with the problems in question.

Very truly yours,
DAVID S. JORDAN.

BLIND CHILDREN ACT

They Stage a Play Without a Hitch in the Performance.

Remarkable Cleverness Displayed by the Sightless Little Ones in Their Grace and Accuracy of Movement.

A company of blind children enacted the play, "Jack, the Giant Killer," at St. Louis recently, reports an exchange of that city.

It was their first attempt in the histrionic line and was pronounced the success of the season by the theatergoers. The children belong to the Missouri school for the blind, and the entertainment was arranged in celebration of the institution's fifty-first anniversary.

The teachers made all of the costumes and trained the performers for weeks beforehand. The latter entered into the spirit of the occasion with all of the zest which more favored children might have exhibited. The remarkable feature was the keenness of perception which they displayed. Guided by some instinct, they never made one false step, but passed and repassed each other on the stage and always found their respective places without a collision. Their movements were all ease and freedom and grace and their steps were as firm and full of confidence as though they had been blessed with the brightest and keenest of eyes.

Sightless lords and ladies bowed to a blind king and queen in courtly style. A blind fairy waved her wand over their majesties without once touching their crowns. The blind Giant Blunderbore marched in all his terrible might across the stage with the most threatening strides and blind Jack the Giant Killer strutted gloriously up and down with his trusty sword. It was all done with such astonishing accuracy, and never was there a mistake in word or action. The orchestra which furnished the music was composed of 15 blind boys, and the attendants of the king and queen numbered some 20 sightless little ones.

So that it was a company which really crowded the narrow stage and made the excellence of the performance all the more notable. A particularly pretty scene was the part in which Jack led the Princess and Fairy Good in a dance which was very much like the Virginia reel.

After the play S. M. Green, superintendent of the institution, was the recipient of many congratulations upon the histrionic achievements of his pupils.

"They can do things and accomplish good in the world, just the same as people that have eyes," he said, proudly. "Our motto is this: 'It is the soul that sees.'"

"We took that motto several years ago to impress on the public the fact that blind people are not a lot of hapless, unfortunate creatures, as some suppose. Aside from the misfortune of being deprived of their sight, blind children are just like other children. They are affectionate, they like to romp and play, they want to be out in the fresh air and sunshine, and they enjoy hearing the songs of the birds, and smelling the perfume of the flowers."
